

Creative Action

The Arts in Public Health

InterAction: Theatre-based Workshops Addressing Social Determinants of Health

with the InterAct Theatre Company

February 8th @ 12pm

Ben Franklin Room, Houston Hall
3417 Spruce Street
(lunch provided)

InterAct Theatre Company produces new and contemporary plays that explore the social, political, and cultural issues of our time. Through the discipline of theater and empowering qualities of the creative process, InterAction, InterAct's school and community-based outreach program, fosters positive social change by promoting reflective thinking in youth about important social issues. InterAction also holds workshops at colleges, universities, and other institutions to promote awareness, discussion, and action regarding issues such as violence prevention, the impact of racism, and other important issues in public health.

RSVP at cphi@pobox.upenn.edu

